CORTLAND STATE WOMEN'S SOCCER

HEAD COACH CHRIS MALONE

One of the most successful collegiate women's soccer coaches in the United States today, 33-year-old Chris Malone has directed Cortland State to a combined 23-9-5 record and two NCAA Division I Tournament appearances since taking over in 1982. Prior to that, Malone coached the University of Virginia women to a 25-10-4 mark in two seasons.

Malone also directed the United States Select Women's Soccer Team, comprised of 13 All-Americans, during the summer of 1982 on a European tour through Germany, Denmark and Sweden.

A native of Bay Village, Ohio, Malone attended the University of Virginia, where he played soccer for four years. Malone received his bachelor and two master's degrees from Virginia and is currently completing work on a doctorate in Sports Psychology from the same institution.

As Cortland State head women's soccer coach, Malone admittedly has a three-fold interest in each of his players.

"In my opinion," says Malone, "I owe my players three things. First and foremost, an education. Secondly, helping each develop into a better soccer player. And lastly, helping each to develop as a functioning human being. They aren't going to play soccer all their lives. Belonging to a team means a lot more than just playing soccer — it means getting along with individuals and getting along with a group."

"Playing for Cortland State means learning to be committed to some goal and striving to achieve that goal. We don't stress the winning or losing aspect. Rather, we set our goals, as a team, at the beginning of the year. Then if we do the right things on and off the field, the winning takes care of itself."

FIFTH IN NATION IN 1983

The Cortland State Red Dragons, the only team other than North Carolina to ever win a women's soccer national championship, remained at the forefront of Division I soccer with an excellent 15-3-2 campaign in 1983. Taut defense and aggressive play, trademarks of C-State soccer units, paced the Dragons to fifth place in final national polls.

Coach Chris Malone's crew played one of the more — if not the most — competitive collegiate women's soccer schedule in the United States this past autumn. The 1983 slate included the top three teams in the country plus seven of the Top 20.

Despite the talented opposition, Cortland held its foes to just 10 goals in 20 outings. A major reason was the presence of senior goalie Joan Schockow, who made women's collegiate soccer history when she became the sport's first four-time All-American in 1983. The phenomenal Spencerport native, a freshman keeper on C-State's 1980 national champion squad, finished her illustrious career with 40 shutouts.

All-America talent perennially fills the Cortland uniforms and 1983 was no exception. In addition to Schockow, senior midfielder Karen DiMarco and junior back Karen Gollwitzer, both Rochester area products, landed All-America plaudits for their play this year.

In an effort to remain at the vanguard of women's soccer, Cortland hosted the Dragon Cup Tournament of Champions in September, when 11 teams from California to Boston and Florida to New York competed at Holloway Field during two days of top-notch soccer. The level of competition present was later evidenced when six Dragon Cup participants were among the 12 teams invited to the NCAA Tournament. Cortland defeated Hartwick for the Dragon Cup title, while Karen Gollwitzer was named tourney defensive MVP.

For the second straight year, Cortland State won a berth in the NCAA Tourney. The Dragons took special pride in being the only tournament member to not offer scholarships to its players, whose motivation to excel came from within. In 1983 as in the past, Cortland State soccer remained a special group of women playing a special brand of soccer.

STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK COLLEGE AT CORTLAND

Located atop one of the many hills in Central New York's "City of Seven Valleys," the State University of New York College at Cortland was founded in 1868 as the Cortland Normal School. Over the decades, the campus expanded and in 1941, by an act of the legislature and the Board of Regents, the institution officially became a college, providing four-year courses leading to a bachelor's degree. In 1948, the state legislature incorporated Cortland College into the new State University of New York.

Today, more than 5,600 undergraduate and 600 graduate students are pursuing degrees within the College's two academic divisions — Arts and Sciences and Professional Studies. Twenty-three departments with a faculty of more than 300 offer the Cortland State student body some 40 majors from which to choose, including liberal arts, elementary and secondary education, health and physical education, recreation education, speech education and speech and hearing handicapped education.

The College's main campus covers 191 acres and includes 30 major buildings. Thirteen of these structures are residence halls and provide on-campus housing for 2,600 students.

At Cortland State, athletics are viewed as having an important role in the educational mission of the College. During the fall, winter and spring seasons, Cortland State participates in 24 intercollegiate sports — 12 men's and 12 women's — in an attempt to provide a broad program of athletics which will meet the needs, interests and abilities of its students.

The stated objective of the College's athletic program is the development and welfare of the student. In the coaching of individual sports as well as in the direction of the overall athletic program, the College endeavors to provide a high calibre of professional leadership which is consistent with the goals of the institution.

Cortland State is particularly proud of its long tradition of intercollegiate athletics and its high standing in small college athletic circles. In support of this heritage, the College offers its student-athletes a number of outstanding indoor and outdoor facilities which are used for intercollegiate competition as well as educational and recreational purposes. The Park Center for Physical Education and Recreation, opened in 1973, features a main gymnasium with a seating capacity of 3,600, an Olympic-size swimming pool with gallery seating for 1,500, and an ice arena which can accommodate 2,500 spectators.
